

application addresses technologies which encompass the broad category of T-cell receptor and chimeric T-cell technologies. As such, it is likely that the technologies will have numerous applications in the field of immunotherapy and will potentially be licensable to multiple applicants for a variety of novel therapeutic approaches. Process for Producing Monoclonal Antibodies Reactive With Human Breast Cancer

J Schlom, D Colcher, M Nuti, PM Hand, FC Austin (NCI)
Serial No. 06/330,959 filed 15 Dec 81
U.S. Patent No. 4,522,918 issued 11 June 85
Licensing Contact: Joseph Contrera, M.S., J.D., 301/496-7056 ext 244

Breast cancer is the second leading cause of cancer death among women, having only recently been surpassed by lung cancer. The incidence rate has remained somewhat steady, and is currently about 108 per 100,000. This invention describes a process to produce antibodies from hybridoma cultures for the detection, prognosis, and treatment of human breast cancer. These eleven antibodies are activated only by tumor cells from human mammary cells and not by apparently normal human tissues. The isotopes of ten and the antibodies are IgG of various subclasses, and one is IgM. The antibodies may be useful in five major areas in the management of human breast cancer: (1) The diagnosis of primary and metastatic breast tumor lesions by assay of human body fluids; (2) the in-situ detection, via gamma scanning, of primary or metastatic breast tumor lesions; (3) the treatment of primary or metastatic breast cancer using one or a combination of the antibodies either alone or coupled with toxic drugs, compounds, or radioactive isotopes; (4) use of the antibodies in the staining of populations of human cells in tissue sections from tumor lesions to indicate the degree of malignancy of the cell populations; and (5) the detection of micro-lesions containing only a few cells that could not be detected by conventional staining techniques. A patent for this invention has been issued by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. (portfolio: Cancer—Diagnostics, in vitro, MAb based; Cancer—Research Materials, MAb based)
