

components of the species' biology and ecology that will contribute greatly to the recovery program.

Hungerford's crawling water beetle will be considered for downlisting to threatened status when the likelihood of the species becoming extinct in the foreseeable future has been eliminated by the achievement of the following interim criteria: (1) Life history, ecology, population biology, and habitat requirements are understood well enough to fully identify threats; and (2) a minimum of four U.S. populations, in at least two different watersheds, have had stable or increasing populations for at least 10 years.

Hungerford's crawling water beetle will be considered for delisting when the likelihood of the species becoming threatened in the foreseeable future has been eliminated by the achievement of the following interim criteria: (1) Identify and protect habitat necessary for long-term survival and recovery; and (2) a minimum of four U.S. populations, in at least two different watersheds, are sufficiently secure and adequately managed to assure long-term viability. The recovery criteria are interim because further research is needed to make them fully measurable. As new information about the species becomes available, and if new populations of the species are discovered, the recovery criteria will be revised. Additional detail on downlisting and delisting criteria is available in the draft recovery plan.

These criteria will be met through the following actions: (1) Protect known sites; (2) conduct scientific research to facilitate recovery; (3) conduct additional surveys and monitor existing sites; (4) develop and implement public education and outreach; (5) revise recovery criteria and recovery tasks, as appropriate, based on research and new information; and (6) develop a plan to monitor B. hungerfordi after it is delisted.
