Background

On July 9, 2009, (74 FR 32810) Notice No. 09–05, “Flightcrew Alerting” that would amend the airworthiness standards for flightcrew alerting was published in the Federal Register. The comment period closed September 8.

By requests dated August 28, 2009, from The Boeing Company; September 2, 2009, from the Air Line Pilots Association, International (ALPA); September 3, 2009, from Airbus; and September 4, 2009, from the General Aviation Manufacturers Association (GAMA); the FAA was asked to extend the comment period by 60 days to permit a more careful review and consideration of the proposed rule.

The FAA considered the requests and has determined that reopening the comment period for an additional 15 days will allow The Boeing Company, ALPA, Airbus, GAMA and others, to complete their review and provide responsive comments on the NPRM. Reopening the comment period for the requested additional 60 days would adversely impact the FAA's harmonization efforts with the European Aviation Safety Agency.

The FAA finds it in the public interest to reopen the comment period for fifteen (15) days to give all interested persons additional time to complete their review and comments on the proposal.

Issued in Washington, DC, on September 11, 2009.

Brenda D. Courtney,

Acting Director, Office of Rulemaking.
