Consultation

A detailed assessment of the human remains was made by the U.S. Department of the Interior, Bureau of Indian Affairs professional staff in consultation with representatives of the Navajo Nation, Arizona, New Mexico & Utah.

History and Description of the Remains

From 1967 to 1983, the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) issued Antiquities Act permits authorizing excavations in the Black Mesa region of Arizona for the purpose of mining coal deposits. The Black Mesa Archaeological Project (BMAP), conducted by staff and students from Prescott College and, later, Southern Illinois University at Carbondale (SIU), gathered archeological and anthropological data on Black Mesa. Initially, the collections were housed at Prescott College. In 1974, Prescott College declared bankruptcy and closed. In 1976, after being housed at Fort Lewis College in Durango, CO, for one year, the BMAP collections and records were transferred to SIU. In October 2018, the BMAP cultural items were transferred to the Museum of Northern Arizona in Flagstaff.

In September 1969, human remains representing, at minimum, one individual were removed from a site on or near Black Mesa in Navajo County, AZ. The individual removed during the excavation, Many Mules, was reburied in a cemetery in Fort Defiance, AZ. In 2018, research on the collection of BMAP cultural items at SIU revealed fragmentary human remains belonging to Many Mules. The 122 associated funerary objects include leather and cloth fragments, beads, pendants, buttons, large mammal bones, and saddle parts.

Documentary evidence shows that all the associated funerary objects were removed from the burial of Many Mules, who was an enrolled member of the Navajo Nation, Arizona, New Mexico & Utah. Consultation with the Navajo Nation, Arizona, New Mexico & Utah provided further confirmation.

- Pursuant to 25 U.S.C. 3001(2), there is a relationship of shared group identity that can be reasonably traced between the Native American human remains and associated funerary objects and the Navajo Nation, Arizona, New Mexico & Utah.

History and Description of the Cultural Items

From 1967 to 1983, the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) issued Antiquities Act permits authorizing excavations in the Black Mesa region of Arizona for the purpose of mining coal deposits. The Black Mesa Archaeological Project (BMAP), conducted by staff and students from Prescott College and, later, Southern Illinois University at Carbondale (SIU), gathered archeological and anthropological data on Black Mesa. Initially, the collections were housed at Prescott College. In 1974, Prescott College declared bankruptcy and closed. In 1976, after being housed at Fort Lewis College in Durango, CO, for one year, the BMAP collections and records were transferred to SIU. In October 2018, the BMAP cultural items were transferred to the Museum of Northern Arizona in Flagstaff.

In July 1971, three cultural items were removed from a site on or near Black Mesa in Navajo County, AZ. The individual removed during the excavation, an unnamed infant from the Begay family, was reburied in a cemetery in Fort Defiance, AZ, at the request of his maternal grandmother, Bessie Begay. The three unassociated funerary objects are cloth fragments from burial blankets.

In July 1971, 110 cultural items were removed from a site on or near Black Mesa in Navajo County, AZ. The individual removed during the excavation, Etsitty Begay, was reburied in a cemetery in Fort Defiance, AZ, at the request of his son, Fred Smith. In July 1971, 33 cultural items were removed from a site on or near Black Mesa in Navajo County, AZ. The 33 unassociated funerary objects include a wooden brush, two shoes, soil samples, mano fragments, fabric samples, and juniper berries.

Documentary evidence shows that all the unassociated funerary objects were removed from burials of three individuals who were all enrolled members of the Navajo Nation, Arizona, New Mexico & Utah. Consultation with the Navajo Nation, Arizona, New Mexico & Utah provided further confirmation.

- Pursuant to 25 U.S.C. 3001(2), there is a relationship of shared group identity that can be reasonably traced between the unassociated funerary objects and the Navajo Nation, Arizona, New Mexico & Utah.
